

I of the Insurgency

by Rexulus Cistoporous

I of the Insurgency

There is currently a major insurgency underway, and we are not talking an insurgency by terrorists. It is a spiritual insurgency of every realm and dimension by dark forces. This article will get to its center, like the eye of a storm. Even though many cannot see it we are definitely in a storm. What does the I stand for you might ask? It can stand for many things; insurrection, insolence, intelligentsia, Illuminati, invasion, internal, individual, illegal, illusion, incantation, illness, and many likely others. They are all somewhat symptoms of the insurgency that is underway. The source of this insurgency is a dark force and we must first realize the root of this force. The three primary origins are Lucifer, the Watchers, and a third more questionable source, Lilith. The fourth section will be discussing the many mythological gods and goddesses. It will cover nearly all of the cultures of the world. The fifth section is going to cover spiritual beings, specifically the Jinn and the disembodied spirits left behind when the Giants died. The conclusion will add up everything together and explain how it is relevant and part of a great deception essentially to try and win the war for everything.

Part One – Lucifer

First let us look at Lucifer or "the Morning Star", "light-bearer". From descriptions it would appear that Lucifer was a Cherubim or possibly a Seraphim. Perhaps he was in fact both. The book of Ezekiel says that he was a cherub which we first hear of in Genesis 3:14. Cherubim/cherubs are angelic beings involved in the worship and praise of God. They were placed to guard the garden with flaming swords so they may have always guarded it and been able to easily enter the garden.

Ezekiel 28:12-15 describes him as an exceedingly beautiful angel. Lucifer was likely the highest of all angels, the most beautiful of all of God's creations. In fact Ezekiel describes him as one of the cherub aka cherubim and that he was covered with every precious stone. He was obviously quite brilliant in both appearance and knowledge. Ezekiel 28:13 tells us about Lucifer being a musician. Satan "the adversary" refers to Lucifer after the fall.

Lucifer has become associated with the name of Satan, the great dragon, mostly because of two biblical verses which symbolically refer to his fall, Isaiah 14:12-14 and Ezekiel 28:12-18. They mention two Kings who are called Lucifer yet the title clearly reference the spiritual power of Satan behind them. The verses describe why Lucifer fell but not when. He did not fall alone from the heavens, in Revelation 12 it alludes that a third of all the host of angels fell with him. Why did they fall, or become expelled from heaven? There are several reasons that have been proposed throughout the ages.

The Bible seems to say Lucifer fell because of pride. He desired to be God, not to be a servant of God dedicated to worship. In Isaiah 14 there are many "I will..." statements. Despite his position and beauty he was not content. Lucifer desired to essentially "kick God off His throne" and take over as the ruler. Interestingly enough, that is what the serpent tempted Adam and Eve with. (Genesis 3:1-5). That after they ate of the tree they would be like gods. We know the serpent is Lucifer because Revelation 13 calls him "that old serpent".

It has also been proposed that Lucifer fell because he refused to bow down and serve mankind but this isn't mentioned anywhere in the Bible or that the angels were ordered to serve us. What we do know is this: the angels were created before the earth (Job 38:4-7). Lucifer's fall, therefore, must have occurred somewhere after the time the angels were created and before he tempted Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden. The book of Ezekiel says Satan was in the Garden of Eden which suggests he was an occupant (or had access) at the same time as Adam's creation. Scripture does not specifically say how long he was there before tempting Adam and Eve.

The book of Job tells us that, for a time at least, Satan still had access to heaven and to the throne of God. "One day the angels came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan also came with them. The LORD They don't to Satan, 'Where have you come from?' Satan answered the LORD, 'From roaming through the earth and going back and forth in it'" (Job 1:6-7). Apparently at that time, Satan was still moving freely between heaven and earth, speaking to God directly and answering for his activities. At what point God discontinued this access is unknown. This suggests that he was still very powerful and that he still had some of his former angelic powers. In fact it doesn't say anywhere that Satan had any changes to his abilities or appearance. The book of Corinthians suggests that Satan can still appear as an angel of light. His brightness was so great Luke says his fall to earth had the look of lightning, which is not only bright but burning hot. It likely resembled a comet or meteor falling to earth.

The original Hebrew word used for serpent is Nachach (Nachash). It comes from a root word, to shine, and means a shining one, which referred to angelic beings. In Chaldee it came to mean brass or copper, because of its shining appearance. Hence also, the word Nehushtan, a piece of brass, in 2Kings 18:4.

Nachach is connected with the word Seraph in the book of Numbers 21. Moses is told to make a saraph, a fiery serpent, and makes a nachash of brass. Nachash is thus used interchangeably with Saraph. Saraph in Isa. 6:2, means a burning one, and therefore because the serpents mentioned in Num. 21 were burning in the poison of their bite, they were called Saraphim, or Saraphs.

If Saraph is used to refer to a serpent because its bite was burning, and is also used to refer to a celestial or spirit-being (a burning one), why should not Nachash be used to refer to a serpent as well as being used to refer to a celestial or spirit-being (a shining one)? By this inference in the Book of Numbers Nachash can be used to refer to either. Lucifer may have had the appearance of a brilliantly shining fiery serpentine looking being.

According to Jewish mythology there are multiple heavens. The second heaven is relevant to the article. Raquia, the second Heaven, is dually controlled by the angels Zachariel and Raphael. It was in this Heaven that Moses encountered the angel Nuriel who stood "300 parasangs high, with a retinue of 50 myriads of angels all fashioned out of water and fire." Also, Raquia is considered the realm where the fallen angels are imprisoned and the planets fastened (Rf: The Legends of the Jews I, 131, and II, 306).

The first heaven is usually considered to be the earth so the second Heaven is the "air" or the atmosphere (including near Earth orbit) between higher heaven and our earth. Satan is called the prince of the power of the "air" in the Bible. This is where Satan and his demons still live and roam.

Satan had rebelled against God before we were ever created and thus was cast out of the third heaven down into the second heaven – the air. This is why the Bible calls Satan “the prince of the power of the air.” Here is the verse that specifically tells us this: “And you He made alive, who were dead in trespasses and sins, in which you once walked to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit who now works in the sons of disobedience.” (Ephesians 2:1-2)

Satan is not confined to the bottomless pit or the lake of fire and brimstone at this time. He is free to roam in the “air” until Jesus' second coming. They were banished from the third heaven but they still have access to heavens 1 (earth) and 2 (atmosphere). The Book of Enoch is very enlightening, as it tells us in great detail the actual plans the fallen angels had against God and humans, after they were banished from Heaven. They wanted revenge for their banishment, they decided that one of the most vengeful acts they could do was to corrupt or contaminate his other created beings, humans. In the end destroying one of God's best works. Some of the top fallen angels came to earth and descended upon Mount Hermon to carry out the plan. The details are told in the story of the Watchers.

The forces of evil have been assaulting humanity for eons, through our entire history. Satan's influence and power is prophesied to come to a head in the second half of the tribulation when the Antichrist is fully possessed and revealed to all. Satan will thus have the last three and half years to wreak as much havoc as he can through the Antichrist and False Prophet before Jesus finally puts an end to the reign of terror.

After the battle of Armageddon ensues and Jesus comes back the Antichrist and False Prophet are the first ones to be thrown into the Lake of Fire and Brimstone. When Jesus comes back to set up His Millennium Kingdom for a thousand years, the Bible tells us that Satan is chained up in the bottomless pit during those thousand years. He will no longer be free to tempt or torment humans during the Millennium Kingdom. However, after the thousand years have ended Satan is let loose for one last time to try and cause a final round of trouble.

The original King James Version tells us that Satan will be let loose for a "little season." The Bible does not tell us how many years Satan will be allowed to run free again. All that we can surmise is that he will only be free to roam for a short period of time. In this event the Bible says that he really gets mad and furious when this event occurs because he knows he has but little time left before Jesus throws him into the lake of fire for eternity.

Before we move on to the next section about the Watchers are the relevant verses from the Bible which have been used above. After which will be some brief expanded information on angels, demons, cherubim, and seraphim.

(Gen 3:24) After He drove the man out, He placed on the east side of the Garden of Eden cherubim and a flaming sword flashing back and forth to guard the way to the tree of life.”

Now for some brief extracted definitions;

An angel is a type of supernatural being, which are messengers of God in religious texts. The term "angel" has also been expanded to various notions of "spiritual beings" found in many other traditions. Other roles of angels include protecting and guiding human beings, and carrying out God's tasks.

Definitions

In art, angels are often depicted with wings, ultimately reflecting the descriptions in the Hebrew Bible, such as the chayot in Ezekiel's Merkabah vision or the Seraphim of Isaiah. Although many depictions and stories usually have them appearing indistinguishable from normal men.

The word angel in English is a fusion of the Old English word engel (with a hard g) and the Old French angele. Both derive from the Latin angelus which in turn is the romanization of the ancient Greek angelos, "messenger".

The Bible uses the terms "messenger of God", "messenger of the Lord", "sons of God", and "the holy ones" to refer to beings traditionally interpreted as angels. Other terms are used in later texts, such as "the upper ones". It is, however, only in the later books of the Bible that these terms come to mean the benevolent semi-divine beings familiar from later mythology and art. Daniel is the first biblical figure to refer to individual angels by name.

With the development of explicit monotheism, these divine beings, the "sons of God" who were members of the divine council, were in effect demoted to what are now known as "angels," understood as beings created by God, immortal and thus superior to humans. One of these "sons of God" is Lucifer/Satan "the adversary". The concept of angels is best understood in contrast to demons and is often thought to be "influenced by the ancient Persian religious tradition of Zoroastrianism, which viewed the world as a battleground between forces of good and forces of evil, between light and darkness."

A demon (or daemon, daimon; from Greek) is a supernatural being described as something that is not human. The original neutral Greek word daimon does not carry the negative connotation initially understood by implementation of the Koine (Hellenistic and New Testament Greek) daimonion, and later ascribed to any cognate words sharing the root, originally intended to denote a Spirit or Spiritual being.

Many of the demons in literature are fallen angels, however there are many people that say that they are born-forged from Hell itself.

Ancient Greek daimon is a word for "spirit" or "divine power", much like the Latin genius or numen. The Merriam-Webster dictionary gives the etymology of the Greek word as from the verb daiesthai "to divide, distribute". To distinguish the classical Greek concept from its later Christian interpretation, it is usually anglicized as either daemon or daimon rather than demon.

The Greek term does not have any connotations of evil or malevolence. In fact, it meant literally "good-spiritedness", a term for "happiness". The term first acquired its now current evil connotations in the Septuagint translation of the Hebrew Bible, informed by the mythology of the ancient Semitic religions.

A cherubim/cherub is a type of angelic being involved in the worship and praise of God. The cherubim are first mentioned in the Bible in Genesis 3:24, as guarding the way to the tree of life in the Garden of Eden. Prior to his rebellion, Satan is described as a cherub in the book of Ezekiel. The tabernacle and temple along with their articles contained many representations of cherubim (Exodus 25:17-22; 26:1, 31; 36:8; 1 Kings 6:23-35; 7:29-36; 8:6-7; 1 Chronicles 28:18; 2 Chronicles 3:7-14; 2 Chronicles 3:10-13; 5:7-8; Hebrews 9:5).

Chapters 1 and 10 of the book of Ezekiel describe the "four living creatures" as the same beings as the cherubim. Each had four faces; that of a man, a lion, an ox, and an eagle, and each had four wings. In their appearance, the cherubim "had the likeness of a man". These cherubim used two of their wings for flying and the other two for covering their bodies. Under their wings the cherubim appeared to have the form, or likeness, of a man's hand. The imagery of Revelation 4:6-9 also seems to be describing cherubim.

A seraphim/seraph is another type of angelic being in Judaism and Christianity. Literally "burning ones", is the plural of "seraph", more properly sarap. The word sarap/seraphim appears three times in the Bible (Numbers 21:6-8, Deuteronomy 8:15) and four times in the Book of Isaiah (6:2-6, 14:29, 30:6). The word seraphim is normally a synonym for serpents - the association of serpents as "burning ones" is possibly due to the burning sensation of the poison. They are mentioned in the book of Isaiah as fiery six-winged and attending on God. Isaiah also uses the word in close association with words to describe snakes (nahash, the generic word for snakes, in 14:29, and efeh, viper, in 30:6). They appear again as celestial beings in an influential Hellenistic work, the Book of Enoch, and a little later in the Book of Revelation.

Isaiah's vision of seraphim in the Temple in Jerusalem is the sole instance in the Hebrew Bible of the word being used to describe celestial beings: there the winged "seraphim" attend God and have human attributes:". Above him stood the Seraphim; each had six wings; with two he covered his face, and with two he covered his feet, and with two he flew." (Isaiah 6:1–3) In Isaiah's vision the seraphim cry continually to each other, "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of His glory" before carrying out an act of purification for Jesus. It is possible that these are winged snake-beings, but given that the word "seraphim" is not attached as an adjective or modifier to other snake-words ("nahash," etc.), as is the case in every other occurrence of the word, it is more probable that they are variants of the "fiery" lesser deities making God's divine court.

"Seraphim" appear in the Book of Enoch where they are designated as drakones (serpents), and are mentioned, in conjunction with the cherubim as the heavenly creatures standing nearest to the throne of God. In the Book of Revelation they are described as being forever in God's presence and praising Him constantly. They appear also in the Christian Gnostic text "On the Origin of the World", described as "dragon-shaped angels".

The ascendant light body of Buddhism and Eastern religion has been noted to correlate. It is achieved through meditation, control of the chakras, and manipulation of kundalina (serpent) energy. A light body is said to glow and be surrounded by rainbow colors. The light apparently makes the person within appear serpentine and to have angelic like wings. Very similar to the description of Seraphim.

Part Two - Watchers

Now let us move on to the next section about The Watchers also known as the Grigori, Greek egregoroi.

They are a group of fallen angels in Biblical apocrypha who mated with human females, giving rise to a race of hybrids known as the Nephilim (the Nephilim are also mentioned in Genesis 6:4, but that verse notably lacks mention of them being human-angel hybrids. The Watchers appear in Biblical apocrypha, in the first and second books of Enoch and the book of Jubilees. The word "Grigori" derives from the Slavonic Second Book of Enoch.

After Lucifer and the rebellious angels who followed him were banished from the third heaven they wanted revenge for their banishment. They decided that one of the most vengeful acts they could do was to corrupt or contaminate his other created beings, humans. Some of the top fallen angels came to earth and descended upon Mount Hermon. These angels were called the watchers, probably because they presented themselves to us as our guardians. Enoch 6: "And they were in all two hundred; who descended in the days of Jared on the summit of Mount Hermon, and they called it Mount Hermon, because they had sworn and bound themselves by mutual imprecations upon it."

This was no random location, but a very precise spot on the planet. The highest slope of the summit is on the border between Syria and Lebanon, while the southern slopes of Mount Hermon are in Israel. This part of the mountain was annexed by Israel in 1981. Mount Hermon has been figured as the site of the Transfiguration, where Jesus took three of his disciples up on a high mountain for prayer. Before their eyes, Jesus was transfigured. He became radiantly white and conversed with Moses and Elijah, who had appeared beside him.

Mount Hermon lies precisely at 33.33° north 33.33° east, 2,012 miles from the equator and 2,012 miles from the prime meridian. The Transfiguration likely occurred there because in Spiritual Numerology, '33' symbolizes the highest level of spiritual conscious attainable by the human being." The number of nautical miles at 33.33 degrees of the earth is 2012. This corresponds to the year and date that the ancient Mayans calendar will end, December 21st, 2012. This is also the year their serpent god and founder of their civilization, Quetzalcoatl, is supposed to return from heaven. Remember that the being that tempted Eve in the Garden of Eden is also called 'The Serpent'. Is this the same being, that may return to the Earth in 2012? Quetzalcoatl does resemble a description of some angels. Interestingly many aliens appear reptilian.

If you go directly opposite Mount Hermon, on the other side of the Earth, you will find yourself at the Roswell UFO crash site. This very strange bit of info may show that the site of the Roswell UFO incident was a chosen spot, and not just some random flying saucer crash site. Could it be, that these ancient fallen angels were telling us that the same event that occurred in 1947 in Roswell New Mexico, will again occur, maybe on a massive scale on Dec 21, 2012? Will Dec 21, 2012 be the unveiling of a worldwide UFO event, and the unfolding of the 'Great Deception', as Jesus warned about in the Holy Bible? A fake rapture and return of Jesus à la Project BlueBeam.

Contaminating the Human Race

In their true angelic form it would be difficult for them to carry out their idea, they could not have sexual intercourse. They had the ability though to assume human form and came upon Mount Hermon. As the Holy Bible states in numerous passages that angels, can look and act exactly like humans, they can sleep, eat, drink and thus they can have sex in human form. It is likely that another reason the fallen angels wanted to contaminate humans was to try to prevent the Messiah from coming from the lineage of Adam to be redeemer of the human race and defeat evil. If no man could be found to redeem man, Satan and the angels would retain administrative control over the fallen earth indefinitely.

The watchers were apparently angels dispatched to Earth to watch over the humans. They sound very much like a group of cherubim. Soon they began to lust for human women, and at the prodding of their leader Samyaza, they defected to illicitly instruct and procreate with humanity. The offspring of these unions were the Nephilim, savage giants who pillage the earth and endangered humanity. Samyaza and associates further taught their human charges arts and technologies such as weaponry, cosmetics, mirrors, sorcery, and other technologies that would have been eventually discovered by humans on their own. Similar to the Greek myth of Prometheus revealing fire-making to humans without Zeus's permission. It is also possible that ancient legends among many cultures about cannibalistic giants and pervasive implementation of magical powers arise from the same ancient myth. Eventually God creates the Flood partly to rid the earth of the Nephilim. While Genesis 6:4

says that the Nephilim remained "on the earth" even after the Flood, Jude 1: 6 says that the Watchers are bound "in the valleys of the Earth" until Judgment Day. They were imprisoned in the mountains and deserts which seems to say they were buried underground or in burial mounds.

Other Apocryphal books say that even now they are held and tortured in the terrible Fifth Heaven, set aside for just this purpose. I Enoch XIII describes the Watchers/Grigori as stricken mute with guilt and terror after Enoch's reproof, and indeed in II Enoch the Grigori imprisoned in the Fifth Heaven are voiceless giants.

The watchers story in Enoch derives from the sixth chapter of Genesis: "When men began to multiply on earth and daughters were born to them, the sons of God saw how beautiful the daughters of man were, and so they took for their wives as many of them as they chose. Then the Lord said: "My spirit shall not remain in man forever, since he is but flesh. His days shall comprise one hundred and twenty years."

Here, the "sons of God" are given no specific name or function; they most likely represent fallen angels. The Book of Enoch regards these as the same angels who are referred to as the Benei Ha-Elohim (Sons of God) in the Book of Genesis. According to this belief, their sins filled the Earth.

In the Book of Daniel an Aramaic term used to denote angels is "watchers". The term "watcher" probably derives from the verb "to be awake" or "to be vigilant," so the implication of calling angels "watchers" is that they are constantly on watch for God. Angels in Jewish folklore are often described as looking like large human beings that never sleep. While there are good and bad "watchers", most stories revolve around evil ones that fell from grace. In the Old Testament (Daniel 4:13-17) there is reference made to the Irin, or "watchers", a high order of angels in Hebrew lore.

The 200

According to the Book of Enoch, the Watchers numbered a total of 200 but only their leaders are named. These are the leaders of 200 angels in 1 Enoch that become fallen Angels due to their taking wives, mating with human women, and teaching forbidden knowledge. The section in the book of Enoch mentions 20 leaders and reads:

"7. And these are the names of their leaders: Semiazaz, their leader, Arakiba, Rameel, Kokabiel, Tamiel, Ramiel, Danel, Ezeqeel, Baraqijal, Asael, Armaros, Batarel, Ananel, Zaqiel, Samsapeel, Satarel, Turel, Jomjael, Sariel. 8. These are their chiefs of tens."

In the Sibylline Oracles, Araziel is referred to as one of the 5 angels who lead the souls of men to judgement, the other 4 being Ramiel, Uriel, Samiel, and Azazel.

Kokabiel was a high-ranking, holy angel but, in general apocryphal lore and also in Enoch I, he is a fallen Watcher, resident of nether realms, and commands 365,000 surrogate spirits to do his bidding.

Shamsiel, once a guardian of Eden, served as one of the 2 chief aides to the archangel Uriel when Uriel bore his standard into battle, and is the head of 365 legions of angels and also crowns prayers, accompanying them to the 5th heaven.

Each of them taught us different knowledge which collectively included the signs of the earth, the resolving of enchantments, to make knives, swords, shields, and how to devise ornaments and the art of cosmetics, astrology, the signs of the clouds (meteorology), astrology, the art of writing with ink and paper", the bitter and the sweet (medication) and the secrets of wisdom", the courses of the moon, the signs of the sun.

The book of Jasher says, "After the fallen angels went into the daughters of men, [then] the sons of men were taught the mixture of animals of one species with the other, in order to provoke the Lord" (4:18).

Mesopotamian legends speak of the fallen ones using the DNA of a single being from their group creating modern humans and mixing it with that of 13 donor lesser humanoids. Interestingly modern genetics, with help from the genome project, now trace modern humanity to 14 females and a single male. All of humanity, except for Africa, have traces of Neanderthal DNA.

The Nephilim

As a result of intercourse with the daughters of man, the women that the Watchers married bore them children called the Nephilim. Nephilim means "violent" or "causing to fall". They were the violent tyrants of those days, those who fell upon others. They were the mighty men (heroes) of old, the men of renown. (Genesis 6:1-4) Their descendants, called Nephilim (translated "giants"), were monsters of iniquity. Nephilim may also be derived from a root signifying "wonder," and hence "monsters" or "prodigies." In Num. 13:33 this name is given to a Canaanite tribe, a race of large stature, "the sons of Anak." The Revised Version, in these passages, simply transliterates the original, and reads "Nephilim." And being superhuman in size and in their wicked character had to be destroyed. Undoubtedly they had some of their angelic parents size and abilities and were taught improper things by them.

The Nephilim were huge. It is possible because the angel Nuriel was described as 300 Parasangs tall. A Parasang is an old Persian measure of distance comparable with the league (around 3 miles). It was equal to the distance you could walk in an hour, or 30 Greek Stadia, 5550 meters. Roughly 3.449 miles. Nuriel was therefore over 1050 miles tall!

The book of Enoch says some of these beings had a height of 'three thousand ells'. A former unit of measure that was also used in ancient times, the measure originally being from the elbow to the fingertips. The exact distance and bearing, depending on who's arm was used and exactly what was measured. If it was the length of the arm shoulder to fingertips or wrist, or elbow to fingertips or wrist. In some languages it was part of the leg above the thigh. It is also a English linear measurement equal to 45 inches. Some countries it was 27 inches and others 32 inches.

The cubit, another ancient measure of length, was also approximately equal to the length of a forearm. It was typically about 18 inches or 44 cm, though there was a long cubit of about 21 inches or 52 cm. The cubit is the usual measurement that is used in biblical texts. When the book of Enoch uses ell it is likely referring to the forearm just like a cubit, or 18 inches.

If one ell equals 1 cubit of 18 inches then 3000 ells equals 4500 feet or 0.85 miles tall, nearly 1 mile tall. 1 mile is exactly 1609.344 meters or 5280 feet. Although this may be an exaggeration used to demonstrate that they were bigger than usual.

The book of Enoch tells us they were very large and had six toes or fingers, as well as multiple rows of teeth. They were violent, very strong and had evil demeanors but were also very intelligent and cunning. They were insatiable and began to eat humans. They even ate each other and drank blood. Not only were they hybrids of mixed human and angelic DNA, they began to sin against birds, and beasts, and reptiles, and fish. In other words having relations and creating strange beings. The biblical Og was close to 15 feet tall, Goliath was over 10 feet tall, and stories dating from the 19th century, tell of men finding bones of giant people in tombs that were as much as 34 feet tall.

It is suggested that the Giants mentioned in Genesis were the same Giants or Titans of Greek Mythology as well as Nordic and many other mythologies. There is some circumstantial evidence to suggest Giants were indeed real. It is said that archeology has discovered some quite large humanoid skeletons. Although all of them have been lost or at least cannot be viewed publicly anywhere. There are rumors that they have been hidden away deep within the private recesses of the Smithsonian, Louvre, and the Vatican. There are some museums where you can still view their gigantic tools and weapons. Also in the middle east you can visit some extremely large burial sites. Some skeletons have also been discovered with strange features and skulls with horns, cranial ridges, and large fangs.

It is interesting that these giants were also called the mighty men (heroes) of old, the men of renown. This statement does resemble rulers in ancient Egypt and Mesopotamia who often proclaimed themselves as "sons of God" to enhance their power and prestige. So, another view is that the "sons of God" were power-hungry rulers and despots, who, in their hunger for power and influence, took many wives in polygamy. They, and their offspring, through tyranny, became "mighty men." (Nimrod was described as a "mighty one" in Genesis 10:8.)

Some of the characteristics and practices of the Nephilim may still be part of humanity. Practices of bloodlust, human sacrifice, cannibalism, vampirism, magic/k, genetic manipulation, polygamy, bestiality, and other vile sexual practices (incest, rape, sodomy...). Characteristics of extra strength and intelligence, gigantism, hybridization, mutation, chimerism, twins, defects, polydactyly, androgyny and hermaphroditism.

Besides creating an untold number of monsters and creatures of mythology, the Giants had several groups of descendants called respectively the Rephaim, Anakim, Emim, Zamzummin, Avim all which shared many of their attributes. Although they seemed to be not quite as gigantic in size as in the earlier times. These descendants are all races said to exist well after the biblical flood. According to the Apocrypha of Baruch there were 4,090,000 giants in existence on the earth before the Flood.

The Apocrypha claim the disembodied Nephilim are the origin of demons, and accuse them of many crimes. Jubilees places the blame for the Flood squarely upon the fornication of the Watchers and the iniquity and bloodshed of the Nephilim. "And now the giants who were born from souls and flesh will be called evil spirits upon the earth," charges I Enoch XV-XVI, "From the day of... the slaughter and destruction of the giant Nephilim, the mighty ones of the earth, the great famous ones, the spirits that have gone out from their souls as from the flesh will destroy without judgment." Even the mortal women who are their mothers are cursed to become sirens and demonesses. In Jubilees X:1-6, Noah's sons beg him to protect their children from "unclean demons" who are "leading astray, blinding and killing" them; Noah, petitioning God to "let not wicked spirits rule over [my grandchildren] and destroy them", adds, "Thou knowest what thy Watchers, the fathers of these spirits, did in my day..." making it clear that the demonic spirits and the Nephilim are considered one and the same. (One wonders if Kainam was one of these grandchildren being "led astray" by a "demonic" Nephilim familiar. They are the origin of incubus and succubus, and the vampyre.

The idea that the spirits of dead giants inhabit the underworld is supported here:

- They're segregated from the heroes, the old-time giants who entered the grave in full battle dress, their swords placed under their heads and their shields covering their bones, those heroes who spread terror through the land of the living. The Message Version, Ezekiel 32:27
- "And he did not know that giants are there, and that her guests are in the depths of hell" (Douay-Rheims Version, Proverbs 9:18)
- "A man that shall wander out of the way of doctrine, shall abide in the company of the giants" (Douay-Rheims Version, Proverbs 21:16)
- "Hell below was in an uproar to meet thee at thy coming, it stirred up the giants for thee" (Douay-Rheims Version, Isaiah 14:9)
- "Let not the dead live, let not the giants rise again..." (Douay-Rheims Version, Isaiah 26:14)

Although the Hebrew Rephaim referred to a race of giants (Deut. 3:11) in Job 26:5 (R.V., "they that are deceased;" marg., "the shades," the "Rephaim") and in Isa. 14:9 this Hebrew word is rendered (A.V.) "dead." It means here "the shades," the departed spirits in Sheol. In Sam. 21:16, 18, 20, 33, "the giant" is (A.V.) the rendering of the singular form ha raphah, which may possibly be the name of the father of the four giants referred to here, or of the founder of the Rephaim. The Vulgate here reads

"Arapha," whence Milton (in Samson Agonistes) has borrowed the name "Harapha." (See also 1 Chron. 20:5, 6, 8; Deut. 2:11, 20; 3:13; Josh. 15:8, etc., where the word is similarly rendered "giant.") It is rendered "dead" in (A.V.) Ps. 88:10; Prov. 2:18; 9:18; 21:16: in all these places the Revised Version margin has "the shades." (See also Isa. 26:14.)

Following is a complete part of the relevant portions of the book of Enoch:

6.1 And it came to pass, when the sons of men had increased, that in those days there were born to them fair and beautiful daughters.

6.2 And the Angels, the sons of Heaven, saw them and desired them. And they said to one another: "Come, let us choose for ourselves wives, from the children of men, and let us beget, for ourselves, children."

6.3 And Semyaza, who was their leader, said to them:

"I fear that you may not wish this deed to be done and that I alone will pay for this great sin."

6.4 And they all answered him, and said:

"Let us all swear an oath, and bind one-another with curses, so not to alter this plan, but to carry out this plan effectively."

6.5 Then they all swore together and all bound one another with curses to it.

6.6 And they were, in all, two hundred and they came down on Ardis, which is the summit of Mount Hermon. And they called the mountain Hermon because on it they swore and bound one another with curses.

6.7 And these are the names of their leaders:

Semyaza, who was their leader, Urakiba, Ramiel, Kokabiel, Tamiel, Ramiel, Daniel, Ezeqiel, Baraqiel, Asael, Armaros, Ananel, Zaqiel, Samsiel, Satael, Turiel, Yomiel, Araziel.

6.8 These are the leaders of the two hundred Angels and of all the others with them.

7.1 And they took wives for themselves and everyone chose for himself one each. And they began to go into them and were promiscuous with them. And they taught them charms and spells, and they showed them the cutting of roots and trees.

7.2 And they became pregnant and bore large giants. And their height was three thousand cubits.

7.3 These devoured all the toil of men; until men were unable to sustain them.

7.4 And the giants turned against them in order to devour men.

7.5 And they began to sin against birds, and against animals, and against reptiles, and against fish, and they devoured one another's flesh, and drank the blood from it.

7.6 Then the Earth complained about the lawless ones.

8.1 And Azazel taught men to make swords, and daggers, and shields, and breastplates. And he showed them the things after these, and the art of making them; bracelets, and ornaments, and the art of making up the eyes, and of beautifying the eyelids, and the most precious stones, and all kinds of coloured dyes. And the world was changed.

8.2 And there was great impiety, and much fornication, and they went astray, and all their ways became corrupt.

8.3 Amezarak taught all those who cast spells and cut roots, Armaros the release of spells, and Baraqiel astrologers, and Kokabiel portents, and Tamiel taught astrology, and Asradel taught the path of the Moon.

8.4 And at the destruction of men they cried out; and their voices reached Heaven.

9.1 And then Michael, Gabriel, Suriel and Uriel, looked down from Heaven and saw the mass of blood that was being shed on the earth and all the iniquity that was being done on the earth.

9.2 And they said to one another: "Let the devastated Earth cry out with the sound of their cries, up to the Gate of Heaven.

9.7 And Semyaza has made known spells, he to whom you gave authority to rule over those who are with him.

9.8 And they went into the daughters of men together, lay with those women, became unclean, and revealed to them these sins.

9.9 And the women bore giants, and thereby the whole Earth has been filled with blood and iniquity.

From other mythologies there are several similar myths to the Watchers and the Nephilim/giants. The Archons, meaning lord or ruler, usually numbering seven were deceptive beings who came to earth, deceiving us by creating a false reality. The lilum, children of Lillith through intercourse with fallen Angels. From Sumeria the Anunnaki, the 50 great ones, those who came from heaven to earth, possibly related the Anakites. They supervised while the Igigi or Igigu did the work. From Egypt are the Ennead, the nine superior gods, and the Ogdoad eight lesser deities in four pairs. From the Norse the Aesir primary gods, the Vamir other gods, and the Jotnar giants. And from Greece are the Titans and Olympians, and the giants and other creatures created by them. There are also probably others I am missing from other cultures such as the Native Americans who told of giants. It is interesting that all of these superior gods came to earth to rule us and give wisdom, and either created directly, or as a result, giants and creatures.

Part Three - Lilit

Next we will move on to the part about Lilit. There are many legends which explain who she was. There are many interpretations which are also quite varied. Let's start with a paraphrase of the most familiar legend, which dates to medieval times, from the controversial work known as the Alphabet of Ben Sirah:

When God created Adam, he was lonely, so God created Lilith from the same dust from which Adam was molded. But they quarreled; Adam wished to rule over Lilith. But Lilith was also proud and willful, claiming equality with Adam because she was created from the same dust. She left Adam and fled the Garden. God sent three angels in pursuit of Lilith. They caught her and ordered her to return to Adam. She refused, and said that she would henceforth weaken and kill little children, infants and babes. The angels overpowered her, and she promised that if the mother hung an amulet over the baby bearing the names of the three angels, she would stay away from that home. So they let her go, and God created Eve to be Adam's mate. And ever since, Lilith flies around the world, howling her hatred of mankind through the night, and vowing vengeance because of the shabby treatment she had received from Adam. She is also called "The Howling One."

In the text an amulet is inscribed with the names of three angels (Senoy, Sansenoy, and Semangelof) and placed around the neck of newborn boys in order to protect them from the lilin until their circumcision. The amulets used against Lilith that were thought to derive from this tradition are in fact, dated as being much older.

The concept of Eve having a predecessor is not exclusive to the Alphabet of Ben Sirah, and is not a new concept, as it can be found in Genesis. From the 8th–10th Century onwards Lilith becomes Adam's first wife, who was created at the same time and from the same earth as Adam. The legend was greatly developed during the Middle Ages, in the tradition of Aggadic midrashim, the Zohar and Jewish mysticism. In the 13th Century writings of a Rabbi, Lilith left Adam after she refused to become subservient to him and then would not return to the Garden of Eden after she mated with archangel Samael.

But where does this legend come from? The author of Ben Sirah basically wove together three separate threads from centuries earlier works, because Lilith is a very ancient legend.

Genesis of course mentions Adam and Eve, but doesn't mention Lilith. The idea of Lilith as a "prior first woman" before Eve arises much later. The only reference to Lilith in the Bible is Isaiah 34:14; a description of desolation, jackals and ravens among nettles and briars, etc. Most of the other creatures referenced cannot be positively identified. The KJV, translates "the lilit" as "the night demon," confusing the lili- with the Hebrew word for night. But presumably Isaiah meant some sort of demon. The notion of a lilit as a demon is probably Assyrian, incorporated by way of the ancient Israelite contacts with the mythologies of Babylonia and Chaldea during their captivity. The Assyrians had three female demons, Lilit, Lilu, and Ardat-Lilit. There's little doubt that the Hebrew lilit-demon mentioned is an adaptation of the Assyrian demons.

Several hundred years after Isaiah, we find Talmudic writings that describe Lilith as an irresistibly seductive she-demon with long hair (presumably worn loose, a sign of wantonness) and wings. The description is that of what we call a succubus. She seduces unwary men, then savagely kills the children she bears for them.

Around a thousand years later the Alphabet of Ben Sira created the legend at the beginning of the article, tying together the legends, merging

(1) Lilith the child-slaying night-demon with (2) the lilit who seduces Adam with (3) the "prior first woman" story.

The Zohar, the great book of Jewish mysticism from the 12th Century, adds yet another dimension. The Zohar generally doesn't mention Lilith by name, but refers to her as the wife of Samael, the Angel of Death,... and sometimes as the wife of Satan. She sleeps with men, causing wet dreams, and she collects semen from the marriage bed.

According to Gershom Scholem, the author of the Zohar, Rabbi Moses de Leon, was aware of the folk tradition of Lilith. He was also aware of another story, possibly older, that may be conflicting. According to the Zohar, two female spirits, Lilith and Naamah, found Adam and desired his beauty which was like that of the sun disk, and lay with him. The issue of these unions were demons and spirits called "the plagues of humankind". The added explanation was that it was through Adam's own sin that Lilith overcame him against his will.

A copy of Jean de Pauly's translation of the Zohar in the Ritman Library contains an inserted late 17th Century printed Hebrew sheet for use in magical amulets where the prophet Elijah confronts Lilith. In this encounter, she had come to feast on the flesh of the mother, with a host of demons, and take the newborn from her. She eventually reveals her secret names to Elijah in the conclusion. These names are said to cause Lilith to lose her power: lilit, abitu, abizu, hakash, avers hikpodu, ayalu, matrota...

The idea that Adam had a wife prior to Eve may have developed from an interpretation of the Book of Genesis and its dual creation accounts; while Genesis 2:22 describes God's creation of Eve from Adam's rib, an earlier passage, 1:27, already indicates that a woman had been made: "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." The Alphabet text places Lilith's creation after God's words in Genesis 2:18 that "it is not good for man to be alone"; in this text God forms Lilith out of the clay from which he made Adam but she and Adam bicker. Lilith claims that since she and Adam were created in the same way they were equal and she refuses to submit to him.

In this folk tradition that arose in the early Middle Ages Lilith, a dominant female demon, became identified with Asmodeus, King of Demons, as his queen. Asmodeus was already well known by this time because of the legends about him in the Talmud. The second myth of Lilith grew to include legends about another world and by some accounts this other world existed side by side with this one, Yenne Velt is Yiddish for this described "Other World". In this case Asmodeus and Lilith were believed to procreate demonic offspring endlessly and spread chaos at every turn. Many disasters were blamed on both of them, causing wine to turn into vinegar, men to be impotent, women unable to give birth, and it was Lilith who was blamed for the loss of infant life. The presence of Lilith and her cohorts were considered very real at this time.

Two primary characteristics are seen in these legends about Lilith: Lilith as the incarnation of lust, causing men to be led astray, and Lilith as a child-killing witch, who strangles helpless neonates. Although these two aspects of the Lilith legend seemed to have evolved separately, there is hardly a tale where she encompasses both roles. Such stories are commonly found among Jewish folklore.

Relation to Demons

Although found earliest in the Babylonian Talmud, as a class of female demons, little information has been found relating to the Akkadian and Babylonian view of these demons.

The semitic root L-Y-L layil in Hebrew, as layl in Arabic, means "night". In Akkadian the terms lilu (male lili and female lilitu) and lalntu mean spirits. Among the spirits the vardat lilitu, or maiden spirit bears some comparison with later Talmudic legends of Lilith. A lili is related to witchcraft in the Sumerian incantation Text 313. The Sumerian she-demons lili have no etymologic relation to Sumerian lilu, "evening."

Some consider that Hebrew lilit (or lilith); and Akkadian: līlītu are from proto-Semitic. Charles Fossey has this literally translating to "female night being/demon", although cuneiform inscriptions exist where Līlīt and Līlītu refer to disease-bearing wind and storm spirits. So it is possible her name is associated not with "night", but with "wind", thus identifying the Akkadian Lil-itu as a loan from the Sumerian lil, "air" — specifically from Ninlil, "lady air", goddess of the south wind (and wife of Enlil) — and itud, "moon". Lilit were said to prey upon children and women. Early portrayals of such demons are known as having bird feet with talons and wings. They were highly sexually predatory towards men but were unable to copulate normally. They were thought to dwell in waste, desolate, and desert places.

Other storm and night demons from a similar class are recorded from Akkadian texts around this period. The Ardat-lili is from Ardat, which is a young unmarried woman or maiden, also sometimes a title of prostitutes, and lilit demon. These "maiden lilt" would come to men in their sleep and beget children from them. Sick men would also be described as being seized by Ardat-lili Their male counterparts, similar to an incubus, were the Ird-lili These demons were originally storm and wind demons; however, later etymology made them into night demons.

Stephen Langdon claims that Babylonian texts depict Lilit as the sacred prostitute of the goddess Ishtar, the Assyrian and Babylonian counterpart to the Sumerian Inanna. There are similar claims that older Sumerian accounts assert that Lilit is called the handmaiden of Inanna or "hand of Inanna". The Sumerian texts state, "Inanna has sent the beautiful, unmarried, and seductive prostitute Lilit out into the fields and streets in order to lead men astray." That is why Lilit is called the "hand of Inanna".

According to Siegmund Hurwitz Lilith retained her Shedim characteristics throughout the entire Jewish tradition. Shedim is plural for "spirit" or "demon". Figures that represent shedim are the shedu of Babylonian mythology. These figures were depicted as anthropomorphic, winged bulls, associated with wind. They were thought to guard palaces, cities, houses, and temples. In magical texts of that era, they could be either malevolent or benevolent. A shedim cult originated in Babylon, then spread to Canaan and eventually to Israel. Human sacrifice was part of the practice and a sacrificial altar existed to the shedim next to the Yahweh cult, although this practice was widely denounced by prophets of Yahweh.

In Jewish thought and literature Shedim were portrayed as quite malevolent. Some writings contend that they are storm-demons. Their creation is presented in three contradicting Jewish tales. The first is that during Creation, God created the shedim, but did not create their bodies and forgot them on the day he rested. The second is that they are descendants of demons in the form of serpents, and the last states that they are simply descendants of Adam and Lilith. Another story asserts that after the Tower of Babel, some people were scattered and became Shedim.

Kabbalah

Kabbalistic mysticism attempted to establish a more exact nature of Lilith. With her major characteristics having been well-developed by the end of the Talmudic period. After six centuries had elapsed between the Aramaic incantation texts that mention Lilith and the early Spanish Kabbalistic writings in the 13th century, she reappears, and her life history becomes known in greater mythological detail.

Her creation is described in many alternative versions. One mentions her creation as being before Adam's, on the fifth day, because the "living creatures" with whose swarms God filled the waters included none other than Lilith. A similar version recounts how Lilith was fashioned with the same substance as Adam was, shortly before. A third alternative version states that God originally created Adam and Lilith in a manner that the female creature was contained in the male. Lilith's soul was lodged in the depths of the Great Abyss. When God called her, she joined Adam. After Adam's body was created a thousand souls from the Left (evil) side attempted to attach themselves to him. However, God drove them off. Adam was left lying as a body without a soul. Then a cloud descended and God commanded the earth to produce a living soul. This God breathed into Adam, who began to spring to life and his female was attached to his side. God separated the female from Adam's side. The female side was Lilith, whereupon she flew to the Cities of the Sea and attacks humankind. Yet another version claims that Lilith was not created by God, but emerged as a divine entity that was born spontaneously, either out of the Great Supernal Abyss or out of the power of an aspect of God (the Gevurah of Din). This aspect of God, one of his ten attributes (Sefirot), at its lowest manifestation has an affinity with the realm of evil and it is out of this that Lilith merged with Samael.

An alternative story links Lilith with the creation of luminaries. The "first light," which is the light of Mercy (one of the Sefirot), appeared on the first day of creation when God said "Let there be light." This light became hidden and the Holiness became surrounded by a husk of evil. "A husk (klippa) was created around the brain" and this husk spread and brought out another husk, which was Lilith.

Tree of Life (Kabbalah)

Lilith is listed as one of the Qliphoth, corresponding to the Sephirah Malkuth in the Kabbalistic Tree of Life. The demon Lilith, the evil woman, is described as a beautiful woman, who transforms into a blue, butterfly-like demon, and it is associated with the power of seduction.

The Qliphah is the unbalanced power of a Sephirah. Malkuth is the lowest Sephirah, the realm of the earth, into which all the divine energy flows, and in which the divine plan is worked out. However, its unbalanced form is as Lilith, the seductress. The material world, and all of its pleasures, is the ultimate seductress, and can lead to materialism unbalanced by the spirituality of the higher spheres. This ultimately leads to a descent into animal consciousness. The balance must therefore be found between Malkuth and Kether, to find order and harmony.

The mystical writing of two brothers Jacob and Isaac Hacoen, which predates the Zohar by a few decades, states that Samael and Lilith are in the shape of an androgynous being, double-faced, born out of the emanation of the Throne of Glory and corresponding in the spiritual realm to Adam and Eve, who were likewise born as a hermaphrodite. The two twin androgynous couples resembled each other and both "were like the image of Above"; that is, that they are reproduced in a visible form of an androgynous deity. In this tradition it is made clear that Samael and Lilith were born as one, similar to the form of Adam and Eve who were also born as one, reflecting what is above. This is the account of Lilith which was received by the Sages in the Secret Knowledge of the Palaces."

Another version that was also current among Kabbalistic circles in the Middle Ages establishes Lilith as the first of Samael's four wives: Lilith, Naamah, Igrath, and Mahalath. Each of them are mothers of demons and have their own hosts and unclean spirits. The marriage of archangel Samael and Lilith was arranged by "Blind Dragon", who is the counterpart of "the dragon that is in the sea". Blind Dragon acts as an intermediary between Lilith and Samael:

The marriage of Samael and Lilith was not allowed to last. To prevent Lilith and Samael's demonic children, Lilin, from filling the world, God castrated Samael. In many 17th century Kabbalistic books, this mythologem is based on the identification of "Leviathan the Giant Serpent and Leviathan the Torturous Serpent" and a reinterpretation of an old Talmudic myth where God castrated the male Leviathan and slew the female Leviathan in order to prevent them from mating and thereby destroying the earth. After Samael became castrated and Lilith was unable to fornicate with him, she left him to couple with men who experience nocturnal emissions. A 15th or 16th century Kabbalah text states that God has "cooled" the female Leviathan, meaning that he has made Lilith infertile and she is a mere fornication.

The Treatise on the Left Emanation says that there are two Liliths, the lesser being married to the great demon Asmodeus. Another passage charges Lilith as being a tempting serpent of Eve.

Greco-Roman mythology

According to Siegmund Hurwitz the Talmudic Lilith is connected with the Greek Lamia, who likewise governed a class of child stealing lamia-demons. Lamia bore the title "child killer" and was feared for her malevolence, like Lilith. She has different conflicting origins and is described as having a human upper body from the waist up and a serpentine body from the waist down. One source states simply that she is a daughter of the goddess Hecate. Another, that Lamia was subsequently cursed by the goddess Hera to have stillborn children because of her association with Zeus. Alternately, Hera slew all of Lamia's children (except Scylla) in anger because Lamia slept with her husband, Zeus. The grief caused Lamia to turn into a monster that took revenge on mothers by stealing their children and devouring them. Lamia had a vicious sexual appetite that matched her cannibalistic appetite for children. She was notorious for being a vampiric spirit and loved sucking men's blood. Her gift was the "mark of a Sibyl," a gift of second sight. Zeus was said to have given her the gift of sight. However, she was "cursed" to never be able to shut her eyes so that she would forever obsess over her dead children. Taking pity on Lamia, Zeus gave her the ability to remove and replace her eyes from their sockets.

The Empusae were a class of supernatural demons that Lamia was said to have birthed. Hecate would often send them against travelers. They consumed or scared to death any of the people where they inhabited. They bear many similarities to lilim. It has been suggested that later medieval lore, succubi, or lilim is derived from this myth.

Biblical verses and source text;

Isa 34:14 "The wild beasts of the desert shall also meet with the wild beasts of the island, and the satyr shall cry to his fellow; the screech owl also shall rest there, and find for herself a place of rest."

The "screech owl" translation of the KJV is, together with the "owl" (probably a water bird) in 34:11 and the "great owl" (qippoz, properly a snake) of 34:15, an attempt to render the passage by choosing suitable animals for difficult-to-translate Hebrew words. Later translations include: night-owl, night-spectre, night monster, vampires, night hag, Lilith, night creature, nightjar, night bird.

As with the Massoretic Text of Isaiah 34:14, and therefore unlike the plural liliyyot (or liliyyoth) in the Isaiah scroll 34:14, lilit in is singular, this liturgical text both cautions against the presence of supernatural malevolence and assumes familiarity with Lilith; distinct from the biblical text, however, this passage does not function under any socio-political agenda, but instead serves in the same capacity as An Exorcism and Songs to Disperse Demons. The text is thus, to a community "deeply involved in the realm of demonology", an exorcism hymn.

After God created Adam, who was alone, He said, 'It is not good for man to be alone.' He then created a woman for Adam, from the earth, as He had created Adam himself, and called her Lilith. Adam and Lilith immediately began to fight. She said, 'I will not lie below,' and he said, 'I will not lie beneath you, but only on top. For you are fit only to be in the bottom position, while I am to be the superior one.' Lilith responded, 'We are equal to each other inasmuch as we were both created from the earth.' But they would not listen to one another.

When Lilith saw this, she pronounced the Ineffable Name of God and flew away into the air.

Adam stood in prayer before his Creator: 'Sovereign of the universe!' he said, 'the woman you gave me has run away.' At once, the Holy One, blessed be He, sent these three angels Senoy, Sansenoy, and Semangelof, to bring her back. Said the Holy One to Adam, 'If she agrees to come back, what is made is good. If not, she must permit one hundred of her children to die every day.' The angels left God and pursued Lilith, whom they overtook in the midst of the sea, in the mighty waters wherein the Egyptians were destined to drown. They told her God's word, but she did not wish to return. The angels said, 'We shall drown you in the sea.'

'Leave me!' she said. 'I was created only to cause sickness to infants. If the infant is male, I have dominion over him for eight days after his birth, and if female, for twenty days.'

When the angels heard Lilith's words, they insisted she go back. But she swore to them by the name of the living and eternal God: 'Whenever I see you or your names or your forms in an amulet, I will have no power over that infant.' She also agreed to have one hundred of her children die every day. Accordingly, every day one hundred demons perish, and for the same reason, we write the angels' names on the amulets of young children. When Lilith sees their names, she remembers her oath, and the child recovers.

Part Four - Gods

Now that we have covered the three primary sources for evil on the planet we are going to move on in the next section to discuss the many different gods of mythology. These gods are every shape and size, and have every imaginable characteristic. I will primarily cover the gods of the Egyptians, the Hindus, and the Greeks. I will briefly mention the gods of the Sumerians, Asiatics, Nordic, Germanic, Celts, and Native cultures of the Africans, aborigines, and Americas. And briefly mention the other gods mentioned in the Bible.

Even the briefest examination of ancient civilizations and every culture on the planet will find stories of strange beings that came down from the heavens to interact with mankind and provide them with religion, knowledge, and technology, before returning to their home amongst the stars. Despite this, history tends to assume that these legends are simply myths. However, considering modern stories of UFOs and alleged alien contact, there are startling similarities between UFO encounters and ancient accounts of gods. The only difference is that early man had no real concept of life on other planets. To them, strange beings coming down from the sky in glowing chariots were understood to be gods, angels, or demons.

Man's first gods were the forces of nature. Terrifying and unpredictable, they were feared rather than revered by our ancestors. Yet while much of the world was in darkness, worshiping cruel incarnations of natural forces, a valley in Africa held a people who followed a different path. They worshiped gods that were beautiful to behold, luminous beings that walked the earth, guiding the human race to Paradise. They had human forms but were much more powerful; yet like humans, they got angry, despaired, fought with one another, had children, and fell in love. They lived lives that were very much like those of the people who worshiped them.

They were also gods to be loved and worshiped. Like the gods of the Greeks and Romans, the gods seemed to be made for storytelling. There were tales to educate, tales to entertain, and tales with morals, and in those stories, the gods didn't seem so far away and unreachable. It was comforting to hear that the gods also wept for those they had lost, to hear about the gods laughing, to learn that the gods faced many of the same problems that the people did, albeit on a grander scale. In learning about the gods on such an intimate level, humanity could better relate to the universe around them.

There were numerous gods, but rather than living on an isolated mountain or in an unreachable heaven, many of them lived invisibly in the mortal world, acting through sacred sites, items, animals, or even chosen people.

Egyptians

The ancient Egyptians practiced a belief system that was part totemism, part polytheism, and part ancestor worship. Their gods represented over 50 separate deities, most of which date to pre-dynastic times. The ancient tribes that made up the region worshiped their own particular gods, which were normally embodied by an animal. As Egyptian civilization advanced, the deities took on human characteristics. In many cases, the gods began to be depicted with human bodies, while retaining animal heads.

Many Egyptian gods have their origin in several of the Egyptian creation myths. These myths attempted to explain the Egyptians' place in the cosmos based on the observation of natural processes. As a result, gods identified with nature became prevalent in the Egyptian creation myths. Some of the most common creation myths refer to the churning sea of chaos that existed before creation. Out of this chaos rose the sun god Ra who then created deities that were both male and female. In turn, these deities gave birth to more deities, and the newly created deities were responsible for the creation of the physical world. Ra was also responsible for the creation of mankind. Ancient Egyptian legends tell of the "First Time," which is described as an age when sky gods came down to Earth and raised the land from the mud and water. They supposedly traveled through the air in flying boats and brought laws and wisdom to man.

They had many gods that simply looked like regular people. There were several gods with animal heads of falcons and hawks, cats, jackals, snakes, and frogs. Others included several other birds such as ibis, heron; horns of a cow, head with a long curved snout, head of a cow, heads of ram, a sphinx, head of a scarab, head of a camel, head of a crocodile, head of a lynx, head of a rabbit, head of a bull, four ram heads. One Goddess with the head of a cobra sometimes had wings. There are also gods that look like strange creatures such as a wasp with hippopotamus body, a crocodile head with lion or leopard and hippopotamus body, a sphinx, a goddess with a scorpion body, as well as a panther dwarf. Others looked like regular animals such as baboon, crocodile, hippopotamus, and cows. Some of the gods also came in different colors being either completely green, black, blue, yellow, gray, red, or brown. Several of them could shape shift into pure animal form.

The Dogon tribe of Mali, Africa refer to beings called Nommo that came from the stars of Sirius. They were said to have humanoid upper torsos, and a fish-like lower torso and tail. There may be a connection to Egypt as scientists currently believe the Dogon originated in the lands which became ancient Egypt.

Possibly the Dogon took their name from worship of the ancient Semitic deity Dagon, starting around 2500 BC, who was worshiped by the people who lived in what is now Israel. Dagon was believed to be one of the four sons of Anu, the lord of heaven. From his navel down, he had the tail of a fish, and from navel up, the form of a man. Very much like a mermaid. The Philistines believed that Dagon flew down from the sky in a ball of fire and taught mankind the ways of the plow and agriculture.

As well, a history of Mesopotamia written in the third century BC stated that ancient man lived in a lawless manner like beasts until there appeared a creature whose name was Oannes or Ea, meaning the "fish of heaven." Oannes' body was like a fish and "under the fish's head he had another head, and connected to the fish's tail, he had feet similar to those of a man." Oannes taught mankind writing and math, and was said to stay in the sea every evening. But when he departed for the last time, he flew up into the sky and returned to the heavens.

Hindu/Vedic

According to Hindu mythology creation happened gradually. The universe in primitive form was made up of something called Ishwat Tattva, which spread homogeneously throughout the universe.

In earlier Vedic thinking, the universe was created by Hiranyagarbha 'the golden embryo' or by Prajapati who was born from the Hiranyagarbha 'the golden womb'. Prajapati was later identified with the puranic Brahma. Other gods are credited with acts of creation, primarily the sky and the Earth - gods who are said to have done this include Indra, Varuna and Vishnu. Another myth which began in late Rig-Vedic times with the Purusha Sukta hymn was the story of the creation of the universe from the remains of the primeval cosmic male Purusha, who had sacrificed himself or been sacrificed by other primeval beings.

Like the Egyptian gods, those of the Hindus of ancient India and surrounding areas had unique physical features and came in several different colors. Golden, blue, green, pure white, pink, and black. Perhaps the most unique looking is Ganesh with the head of an elephant and between 4 and 10 arms. Many of the Hindu gods have a similar number of arms. Several have multiple heads, two of the more popular deities had four and six respectively. One of the gods is a monkey, and another had a human body but the head, beak, talons, and wings of an eagle.

They had many magical abilities and were able to take on different forms or avatars for themselves. Vishnu for example has taken the form of a fish, tortoise, boar, man lion, a dwarf, and several humans. They seem to operate similar to Angels as they are often fighting demons and other creatures. All of the Hindu gods have different instruments and weapons, having many different skills and knowledge that they taught humans. They also built flying cities and craft similar to UFOs with advanced, incredibly deadly weapons.

Greek and Roman

The Ancient Greeks were a deeply religious people. They believed in many gods who appeared in human form, but who had superhuman powers and strength. Historians are not certain when these stories about the gods originated. The Greeks and Romans shared their stories but used different names. The Greek gods were pretty much an exact mirror for humanity although perhaps slightly exaggerated. They were violent and jealous, and the male gods were womanizing. They were always competing for the favor of humans and interfering with humanity, sometimes just for fun. They had varied magical abilities such as being able to take form of other creatures and almost what you would call mind control. They also each have their own magical weapons and abilities and knowledge such as fire to bestow upon us.

The story of the origin of the Greek gods is very long and detailed, The Olympians are the most well-known of the Greek gods. The story begins with the elder gods, the Titans, who ruled the earth before the Olympians. Cronus was the ruler of the Titans and he was married to Rhea. Together they had several children, Cronus would swallow his children soon after they were born. Rhea was not happy with this situation, so when one of her son's was born, she hid her child and tricked her husband into swallowing a rock instead. This child was named Zeus, and as predicted, overthrew his father and the Titans, rescued his swallowed brothers and sisters, and became the ruler of the Olympians.

The Olympians were a group of twelve gods who ruled the earth. They each had different personalities and responsibilities. The people of the ancient Greek civilization greatly worshiped and respected these gods. They also built many shrines and buildings for these gods, and much of the art from the time depicts images of these gods.

The Titans also have other children besides the Olympians which were monsters and gigantic creatures. As a result of interference from both groups and the use of magic many different types of strange creatures were created as well. Out of the world's cultures the Greeks had the greatest number of strange mythological creatures in their stories.

Sumerian

Clay tablets inscribed around 2,600 BC by the ancient Sumerians detail a 400,000 year history that included visits by creatures called Annunaki, who flew in vehicles called Shem. These celestial craft were described as being tall, rocket-like "rocks" which emitted fire. The Sumerians never called the Anunnaki gods but rather dingir, meaning "righteous ones of the bright pointed objects."

The Anunnaki were ancient beings first chronicled by the Sumerians in some of their writing. The Anunnaki were originally believed to be Sumerian deities, and their worship spread to the Akkadians and the Babylonians. The Babylonians worshiped the Anunnaki as servants of Marduk, one of their principle gods. They were the children of the gods Anu and Ki, hence their name. Marduk assigned these deities to heaven and earth, and in thanks, they built for him Esagila, a huge tower.

Some believe that the Anunnaki were beings from the planet Nibiru, the so-called tenth planet. A number of Sumerian writings seem to indicate that this planet exists and that it has been a part of, and will return to, our solar system. In ancient times, one of Nibiru's moons collided with the planet Tiamat. When the two collided, Tiamat was split in two. Then Nibiru itself hit the two pieces. One of the pieces shattered and became the asteroid belt. The other was moved into a new orbit and, over time, became the earth.

The visitors stayed in human-built temples where they were waited on hand and foot. The detailed descriptions of everything from who could shake hands with the gods first to what food was served and how the gods were transported to their Shems, implied that the Sumerians were not speaking of spiritual visitors, but actual physical beings who traveled to the earth from outer space.

Most who study the Sumerian myths agree that the Anunnaki were here looking for gold to use as a source of power or to repair their planet's atmosphere. The Anunnaki, needing a source of labor, genetically engineered humans to mine the gold for them. They are said to have created humans by combining their own genes with the primitive Neanderthal to create us "in their image and after their likeness". The Anunnaki instituted the idea of a hierarchy to more easily control humanity, with the kings at the top serving as speakers for them. Eventually, however, there was disagreement on the mining expedition between the Anunnaki. According to Sumerian myth, the ancient Sumer city of Ur was destroyed by an "evil wind" which many now believe was a nuclear fallout from the war which occurred between the two Anunnaki groups. This explains why the Anunnaki are no longer on earth today.

The Sumerians tell us that the Anunnaki had "helpers" that often performed such tasks as flying their craft , or helping with miscellaneous needs. The Sumerians directly explain that these "Helpers" were not alive, but acted as so. This information poses an interesting Hypothesis that the "Anunnaki" had "Android Beings" helping them.

When we analyze the descriptions of Aliens from people who claim to have been abducted, most of the aliens are described as being small gray beings that have large eyes, a bulbous head, and act almost "Android" like. It is possible that the Grays were created by the Anunnaki as "Watchers" to oversee their experiments and work here on earth. Maybe the Anunnaki even used a mix between the known "ZETAS" or "GREYS" and created an Android race to assist them.

Asiatics

Chinese mythology has survived throughout the long centuries to produce some of the world's most interesting and entertaining myths, legends and gods. It is a mixture of folktales and beliefs used to pass on history, religion and teach proper behavior. It arose by people trying to explain many of the natural forces, promote their gods, and for entertainment. It holds a vast amount of romantic and tragic legends and characters. There are gods and demons, and a variety of mythological creatures.

Dragons are a common theme and one of the most popular creatures in Chinese Mythology. Unlike the European Dragons they don't fly using wings and accounted for a wide range of functions. Water was always associated with dragons. The four Dragon Kings (Long Wang) ruled the seas, the lakes and the rivers where they lived during the winter. Detailed descriptions were given of the finery of their crystal palaces. Besides ruling over the aquatic life, they also manipulated clouds and rain. In the spring and summer they would bring rain to those who paid them respect. When enraged, they could cause flood cities. Although Dragon Kings appear in their true forms as dragons, they have the ability to shape shift into human form. There are numerous temples dedicated to Dragon Kings in China. Chao-Tian Palace is devoted to the goddess Mazu, who in contrast to the Dragon Kings, although also a deity of the sea, is a motherly figure who never wreaks havoc. The palace also has human-shaped statues for the four Dragon Kings, each riding on a dragon.

While the dragons symbolized male traits, the Chinese Mythology also told of the Phoenix, which was considered female. The Phoenix was a bird that lived for 500 to over 1000 years and then would build a house of wood and burn itself up, only to rise again from the ashes.

There also were the Eight Immortals. These are believed by some to be based upon actual characters from Chinese history. They started off as normal, mortal people, but through various means obtained immortality. It is a mixture of Royalty, beggars, prostitutes and scholars. These gods and goddesses all symbolized different aspects of nature but the key deity was the 'Jade Emperor'. His heaven was modeled on that of the emperor on earth, who had his own divine officials and ministries.

One of the more important gods was Pan Gu who created the world. Legend states that before heaven and earth separated thus, the universe was chaos which eventually came together to create a giant egg. In the middle of this egg was a giant named Pan Gu, who slept in the egg for 18,000 years before breaking the egg open. This sent the elements of creation flying in all directions; the lighter elements (yang) traveled upwards and became heaven whilst the heavier ones (yin) flew downwards and became earth. With the sky resting on his head and his feet firmly on the ground, Pan Gu pushed, separating heaven and earth. After another 18,000 years he finally lay on the ground and died, his body becoming all the natural things in the world.

Nu Wa (a goddess) was Pan Gu's co-worker who created humans and marriage, as well as musical instruments. She was as the mother goddess one of the most important Daoist deities. Fu Xi helped Nu Wa and was the father of the Chinese people, fashioning the first people out of mud. His descendants became the emperors and he taught about weaving and fishing (plus made string instruments). She was also said to have repaired heaven when it was destroyed by the god Gong-Gong.

However, the world (according to Daoist belief) did not emerge out of nothing - instead it was created by the turning of formlessness into an ordered pattern. The existing elements which were mixed together in chaos were moulded into a fashion which is the resulting world. The ancient Chinese people imagined that the primeval chaos was a large cloud of moist vapor which was suspended in darkness.

Chinese mythology has been influenced by different cultures and their peoples; the religions of Hinduism and Buddhism, and then later Islam, each gradually traveled eastwards until they reached China. Even the native deities that traveled with these religions all had a direct impact on the religious belief systems of the Chinese people who adopted, adapted and then embraced them as their own deities. The gods of these religions affected nearly every aspect of Chinese society and culture and have been the basis of entertainment.

During the ancient Shang dynasty, we have evidence that ancestral worship was practiced to a great extent. These mortals were, upon their deaths, venerated as gods.

During the 6th century BCE, Confucianism arose, which was founded by Master Kong (Confucius) but it wasn't until the Han dynasty that his philosophy became the official belief of the state. Although his belief system stressed the ideal of family life, he remained somewhat unclear on supernatural beings and their worship.

At this time, Daoism (also spelled Taoism) was also emerging and making an impact on religious beliefs. This Daoist deities seemed to have great appeal to the underprivileged classes. It was a nature religion, its participants seeking the Dao, the principle underlying nature. It wasn't until the first millennium CE that Daoism developed a vast array of deities for the people to worship, people who had many different myths and legends to promote their message.

Buddhism was introduced via the Silk Road in around the 2nd century CE where it was not welcomed with loving arms. Its lack of deities to worship did not appeal to the majority of the people. However, Buddhism incorporated the native deities of the people it met along the way and it was this assimilation, and the introduction of bodhisavattas (Buddhas-to-be), as well as its similarities with Daoism that Buddhism that allowed it to survive in China. Because of this, certain Daoist gods have Buddhist qualities and vice versa.

In Tibet, "the translated word of Buddha", completed in 1411, tells of flying "pearls in the sky" and of transparent spheres carrying gods to visit man. The Kanjyur also describes how we are reborn time and time again not just to Earth, but to other planets in the universe. In fact, the Royal Pedigrees of Tibetan Kings state that the first seven Tibetan kings came from the stars.

Five thousand years ago, when the Turks started their journey from Central Asia towards today's Turkey, they brought with them a belief that intelligent beings can be found on other worlds. The original Turks were called GökTürk, meaning "sky people." Their earliest creation stories started by describing the flying gods called Kara-han, who created the world and then populated it with their brethren from the stars.

Nordic and Germanic

Norse mythology developed from the myths and legends of peoples from the northernmost parts of Europe, Scandinavia: Sweden, Norway, Denmark, and Iceland who spoke Germanic languages. It shares many features with the mythology of pre-Christian Germanic groups. When some of these groups spread into England and Scandinavia, they carried their myths with them. As they converted to Christianity, their traditional beliefs faded. But Christianity did not take hold in Scandinavia until a later date, and the Norse version of Germanic mythology remained vigorous through the Viking era, from about AD 750 to 1050. Modern knowledge of Norse mythology stems from medieval texts.

A major source of information about Norse mythology is a book called the Poetic Edda, sometimes known as the Elder Edda. It consists of mythological and heroic poems, including Voluspa, an overview of Norse mythology from the creation to the final destructive battle of the world, called Ragnarok. Around 1222, an Icelandic poet and chieftain named Snorri Sturluson wrote the Prose Edda, or Younger Edda, which interprets traditional Icelandic poetry.

Norse mythology is known from other Scandinavian texts as well. In the early 1200s, Icelanders started writing family sagas about their ancestors and heroic sagas about their heroes. Also in the 1200s, a Danish scholar wrote a history of the Danish people that begins with an account of their pagan gods and ancient heroes. Works by earlier Roman and medieval historians also include information about Germanic and Norse myths. In AD 98 the Roman historian Tacitus wrote Germania, a description of the Germanic tribes, that mentions some of their religious beliefs and customs.

Various accounts of the creation of the world and of human beings appear. All begin in Ginnungagap, a deep empty space between realms of heat and ice. Frost formed and became a giant, Ymir. A cosmic cow named Audhumla also appeared. Licking the cliffs of ice, she revealed a man who had three grandsons. One of them was Odin. With his two brothers, Odin killed the frost giant Ymir and formed the earth from it's body, the seas and rivers from it's blood, and the sky from it's skull, which was held suspended above the earth by four strong dwarfs.

Once they had killed Ymir, Odin and the other gods created an orderly universe in three levels. Although journeys between the different levels of the universe were possible, they were difficult and dangerous, even for the gods. The top or heavenly level contained Asgard, the home of the Aesir; Vanaheim, the home of the Vanir; and Alfheim, the place where the light or good elves lived. Valhalla, the hall where Odin gathered the souls of warriors who had died in battle, was also located here. Connected to this upper level by the rainbow bridge, Bifrost, was the middle or earthly level. It contained Midgard, the world of men; Jotunheim, the land of the giants; Svartalfaheim, the land of the dark elves; and Nidavellir, the land of the dwarfs. A huge serpent called Jormungand encircled the middle world. The bottom level consisted of the underworld of Niflheim, also known as Hel after Loki's daughter Hel, who ruled there.

Like the Greek deities, the Norse gods and goddesses have all the characteristics of larger-than-life human beings. Unlike the Greek deities, however, they seldom interact with human beings. The world of Norse mythology includes two groups of gods, the Aesir and the Vanir, as well as giants, trolls, elves, dwarfs, and heroic human warriors.

The Aesir were gods of war and of the sky. Chief among them was Odin, god of battle, wisdom, and poetry, who was regarded by the Vikings as the ruler of the deities and the creator of humans.

The Vanir were associated with the earth, fertility, and prosperity. In the beginning, the Aesir and Vanir waged war against each other. Realizing that neither side could win, the two groups of gods made peace and together fought their common enemy, the giants.

The supernatural beings who inhabited the Norse mythic world included elves, creatures related to humans; and dwarfs, skilled craft workers who made many of the finest treasures of gods and humans. The most powerful and dreaded mythological beings were the giants, huge beings associated with ice, snow, and paralyzing cold. Although the giants were generally enemies of the gods, many marriages took place between deities and giants.

Celtic

The Celts were very religious and believed in reincarnation and the migration of the soul to the after life after death. They did not believe in punishment after death. The Celtic Pantheon held many female deities of primary importance ranging from war goddesses to mother goddesses to ruling goddesses. They also believed in 3 aspects of the God/dess, three aspects of a single god. The teachings of the Druids could be summed up quite easily: worship the gods, be strong, courageous and do no evil.

Human sacrifices by the blade, burning, or drowning were done because it was believed that a life must be given for a life, as in murder, accidental killing, extreme illness, or to be spared from the horrors of battle.

Generally, those who were killed were prisoners of war or criminals. This practice does not, however, seem to have been used much at all in Ireland and Britain.

Women were equal to men and held just as much power, and Priestesses were highly revered. Priestesses sang the dying to sleep, did charms, enchantments, prophecies, healing, etc. They knew the power of words, stones and herbs. One of the central features of their Groves was a cauldron, bowl or pool. Curses were cast for any mistreatment of women. Red-hair females were sacred to the war Goddesses, as their hair was the color of blood.

There are many different mythological creatures who interact with the gods and some of them were created by them. They include different fairy, nature spirits, water creatures, hell hounds, elves and dwarves. There are even some giants.

Natives

In a time before the development of the written word, ancient man painted scenes on rock walls or on the ceilings and walls of caves. This art work mostly shows wild animals and sometimes people. But, all across the planet, prehistoric art also depicts strange objects and unusual humanoid creatures.

For instance, 29,000-year-old cave paintings in Tanzania depict several disc-shaped objects that appear to be hovering over the landscape. Another painting shows four humanoid entities surrounding a woman while another looks down from the sky from inside some sort of box. Likewise, inside the French cave of Pech Merle near Le Cabrerets are paintings from around 16,000 BC that show a number of saucer-shaped objects. In northern Australia, there are a number of 5,000-year-old cave paintings that show strange beings with large heads and eyes, wearing spacesuit-like garments. The Aborigines said that these creatures, called Wandjina, came down from the Milky Way during the Dreamtime and created the Earth and all its inhabitants.

Brazilian tribal natives also believe in gods or travelers from the sky who descended to earth when humans were little more than animals, to instruct them in agriculture, astronomy, and medicine. One being in particular, Bep-Kororoti, a space warrior, supposedly possessed a flying vehicle capable of destroying anything in its path. His appearance is said to have terrified the natives until he stepped out of his suit to reveal himself to be fair-skinned, handsome, and kind. He supposedly amused the natives with his magic until he grew restless for his own land in the sky and returned there.

Quetzalcoatl is one of the major deities of the Aztecs, Toltecs, and other Middle American peoples. In their native language his name means "feathered serpent". He is the creator sky-god and wise legislator. He organized the original cosmos and participated in the creation and destruction of various world periods. Quetzalcoatl ruled the fifth world cycle and created the humans of that cycle. The story goes that he descended to Mictlan, the underworld, and gathered the bones of the human beings of the previous epochs. Upon his return, he sprinkled his own blood upon these bones and fashioned the humans of the new era. He is also a god of the wind , as well as a water-god and fertility-god.

The Aztecs later made him a symbol of death and resurrection and a patron of priests. The higher priests were called Quetzalcoatl too. The god has a great affinity with the priest-king Topiltzin Ce Acatl Quetzalcoatl, who ruled the Toltecs in Tula in the 10th century. The cult of Quetzalcoatl was widespread in Teotihuacan, Tula (or Tullán, capitol of the Toltecs in central Mexico), Xochilco, Cholula, Tenochtitlan (current Mexico City), and Chichen Itza.

In North America, legend has it that around 720 AD, the struggling Cahokian tribes along the Mississippi river in Illinois were dying of famine and disease. On the brink of collapse, they were supposedly visited by numerous robed beings from the sky who offered them the knowledge and technology needed to save their civilization from extinction.

Kachina dolls were carved out of wood by the Zuni and Hopi tribes. There are over 300 different Kachina. They are generally clothed in masks and costumes to look like the men who dressed up as Kachina spirits. They were given to children to teach them to identify the different Kachina, and the parts they play in tribal ceremonies.

The Kachina, or Gods, were beings of a great might and power to the Native Americans. They were known to come down to Earth and help the native Americans tend their fields, bringing wisdom about agriculture, law and government. They physically interacted with the people themselves. There are drawings of them on cave walls.

Native Americans followed the movements of the celestial markers (stars) much as we do today. They called it Star Knowledge. Beyond the land where they lived, was the sky, which had dimensional portals or sky holes. Beyond that was an area that they called the Ocean of Pitch, where the beauty of the night sky and the galaxies spun out towards them. Beyond that were the boundaries of the universe. Set along the rim at the boundaries of the universe were four different extraterrestrial groups.

The Hopis called the Pleiadians the Chuhukon, meaning those who cling together. They considered themselves direct descendants of the Pleiadians. The Navajos named the Pleiades the Sparkling Suns or the Delyahey, the home of the Black God. The Iroquois pray to them for happiness. The Cree claim to have come to earth from the stars in spirit form first and then became flesh and blood. They believe that Mythic Mountain is actually the home of the Kachina. This mountain top is a sacred one. Being the home of the kachina spirits, it is the place where all of the large mythic beings they honor in their rituals arrive.

There are some remarkable drawings that appear to be luminous discs of light in the petroglyphs all over the US south west. In the rocks and caves of the Mesa villages, many petroglyphs match up with modern star charts and constellation patterns. The Hopi villages line up with all the major stars in the Orion constellation.

The Snake People and the Ant People

The Hopi speak speak of the Snake People (metaphor for human DNA) and the Ant People who protected them when they lived beneath the surface. Physical reality is a metaphor for 'beneath the surface'. To rise above is to return to higher consciousness, through the Back Hole (Eye of Time) or the Stargate of human creation.

In Apache and other Pueblo Indian legends, such as the Zunis and Hopi legend, the world has gone through several phases or cycles already, and we are living in the Fourth World. In the original world, which was according to legend destroyed by fire, the benevolent Ant People sequestered everyone underground with them and shared what they had. The people were safe from the fire and destruction above. As the Sky God, Sotuknang, systematically destroyed the world above, the people waited patiently for the fires to burn and the earth to cool. When the destruction was completed, the Sky God gave them blessings and told them to love and nurture the earth so that destruction was not warranted again. With humanity being what it is, there have been two worlds destroyed since then, and this, the Fourth World is set for destruction and the appearance of the Fifth and final world. This was prophesied to happen when the Blue Kachina (star people) or the Blue Star appeared. This was to signify the end of the Fourth World, and would be foretold by the Kachina removing their masks and becoming one with the powerful beings they are said to represent.

It is interesting to note that other civilizations besides the ancient Sumerians had similar creation stories recorded through petroglyphs and wall drawings. The Annunaki like the Ant People of the Hopi, were there to teach mankind about the earth and how to use its resources. An interesting note is that the Hopi word for ant is "anu". The word for friends is "naki". There is also the similar pronunciation of the Hopi ancestors, the Anasazi. Again we see this phrase in another belief in another part of the world besides Sumeria.

Biblical

The ancient tales of creatures from the heavens were woven into the fabric of what would later become modern organized religions. Coptic Gnostic texts written around the first and second centuries AD contain passages that describe ancient encounters with alien-like beings called the Archons. A passage from The First Apocalypse of James states: "They are not entirely alien, for they are from the Fallen Sophia, the female divinity who produced them when she brought the human race down from the Source, the realm of the Pre-Existent One. So they are not entirely alien, but they are our kin."

Let's look at some of the gods besides Yahweh (YHWH, Elohim, Adonai) mentioned in the Bible some of which are still worshiped today:

Adrammelech in II Kings 17:31, Anammelech in II Kings 17:31, Ashima in II Kings 17:30, Ashtoreth in I Kings 11:05, Baal in I Kings 18:19, Baal-berith in Judges 8:33, Baal-peor in Numbers 25:03, Baal-zebul in Luke 11:19, Baalim in I Kings 18:18, Bel Isiah in 46:01, Chemosh in I Kings 11:07, Dagon in I Samuel 05:02, Diana of the Ephesians in Acts 19:35, Jupiter in Acts 14:12, Mercurius/Mercury in Acts 14:12, Milcom in I Kings 11:05, Molech/Moloch in probably Baal-Hammon of Carthage in I Kings 11:07, Nebo/Nabu in Isiah 46:01, Nergal/Meshlamthea in II Kings 17:30, Nibhaz in II Kings 17:31, Nisroch in II Kings 19:37, Rimmon/Ramman/Rammon in II Kings 05:18, Succoth-benoth/Zarpanitu/Zerpanitum in II Kings 17:30, Tammuz in Ezekial 8:14, Tartak in II Kings 17:31

Part Five - Jinn and Demons

Earlier it was stated that the disembodied spirits of the giants and other abominations killed during the flood became Demons. At least by the modern sense of the word, a malevolent spirit. The very first original meaning of demon of course meant any kind of spiritual being. They could be good, bad, or somewhere in between. Eventually Angels, including fallen Angels, were separated from the term. Through time the term demon has taken on a purely evil persona. This is likely why the Jinn are also separated from the term. They are supernatural creatures originating in Middle Eastern folklore, known as genies in English.

Jinn is a word of a collective number in Arabic, derived from the Arabic root j-n-n meaning 'to hide, conceal' or 'be hidden'. Arabic lexicons define Jinn not only as spirits, but also anything concealed through time, status, and even physical darkness. An Arabic word for garden or Paradise, jannah, is a cognate of the Hebrew word gan 'garden', both derived from the same Semitic root. In arid climates, gardens have to be protected by walls; the same concept as in the word paradise from pairi-daeza, an Avestan word for garden. It literally means 'having walls built around'. The protection of a garden behind walls implies its being hidden from the outside.

Amongst ancient Middle Eastern cultures, any spirit lesser than angels is often referred to as a Jinni. This is why the word genie is used in English, derived from Latin genius, which meant a sort of tutelary or guardian spirit thought to be assigned to each person at their birth. English borrowed the French translation of genius, genie. The French translators of The Book of One Thousand and One Nights used genie as a translation of Jinni because it was similar to the Arabic word in sound and in meaning.

Currently they reside in a parallel dimension of the earth, usually referred to as the etheric plane. At one time they resided in heaven like the Angels. It is said that they resided on the earth for 4000 years before man was created. They abused their freedom by refusing to bow to humans when ordered to. For disobeying they were expelled from Paradise and denied further access to heaven. Supposedly they have free will like humans and like us they can be good, evil, or benevolent. Like humans, Jinn will also be judged on the Day of Judgment according to their deeds. Unlike us Jinn are said to have been created from smokeless flame. They are usually invisible to humans. A companion of Mohamed described them as creatures of different forms; some resembling vultures and snakes, others tall men in white garb. They may even appear as dragons, onagers, or a number of other animals. In addition to their animal forms, the Jinn occasionally assume human form to mislead and destroy their victims. Some believed the Jinn were generally "ignorant, untruthful, oppressive and treacherous". They are known to be untrustworthy, mischievous and tricksters. Another belief is that the Jinn that whisper to people's souls and tell them to submit to evil desires. They account for much of the "magic" and paranormal activity perceived by humans. While other things such as possession and poltergeist type activity is carried out by demons who reside in the same spiritual realm of the earth as the Jinn. Although they came along at a fairly later date. The demons carry out the activities they do because they are evil, violent, angry and strongly desire to regain bodily form. It is unclear what the Jinn fully do or what their purpose was. By one of their types titles it is clear that originally they were tempters and accusers appointed by God to test mankind's faith. There is a possibility that the demons have influenced how some of the Jinn act.

Types of Jinn include the shaytan, the ghul, the marid, the ifrit, and the jinn. Ifrit seem to be the strongest form of Jinn, followed by marids, and then the rest of the Jinn forms. A few traditions divide Jinn into three classes: those who have wings and fly in the air, those who resemble snakes and dogs, and those who travel about ceaselessly. Jinn have the power to travel large distances at incredible speeds and are thought to live in remote areas, mountains, seas, trees, and the air, in their own communities. The social organization of the Jinn community resembles that of humans.

According to traditions, the Jinn stood behind the learned humans in Solomon's court, who in turn, sat behind the prophets. The Jinn remained in the service of Solomon, who had placed them in bondage, and had ordered them to perform a number of tasks.

It is interesting that they are described as being able to have the form of snakes or serpents. Also that they resided in the garden of Eden or that their name partly derives from garden. The infamous snake from the Bible very well could have been one of these lesser spirits. It also seems like they may have served under the seraphim aka fiery serpent class of Angels covered in an earlier part.

Part Six - Conclusions

This is the final part of the insurgency article, it will tie everything together. So far we have discovered that the primary source of evil is that of fallen Angels. They fell, more correctly were banished, from heaven for different reasons, most of which are included among the seven deadly sins. They were restricted to our realm and have been intent on our destruction. Causing chaos and confusion, tempting us to err. We also saw the potential for evil within humanity. Some of the Angels left their place to be among us, teaching us and having children with us. Doing their will instead of God's. As a result cruel evil giants were produced. The iniquity and corrupt ways progressed, bringing about all sorts of improper things. One of the worst things was making all sorts of genetic monstrosities and abominations. There was also Lilith who went to be with some of the fallen angels and produced other monstrosities as offspring. All of the fallen angels were later confined within the earth. The giants and all the other creatures were destroyed in the flood, their souls subsequently becoming demons. Next was shown how the ancient gods of legend and all of the creatures of mythology resembled the story of fallen angels and their creations. Many of these gods were said to have left before the flood and that they would return in mass at some future time. There have been some visitations and outbreaks of gigantism in the meantime. The grand deception is the idea that when they return it will be under the guise of aliens and usher in a new golden era. It is believed that some false global calamity will be created so they can appear to be our saviors.

The Bible tells us that when Jesus returns it will be very suddenly and take many by surprise. People will be ignoring the warning signs and not be taking note of the tribulations. The Gospel warnings will be preached throughout the world before his return. Gospels tell us there will be many deceptions, false prophets and saviors, lots of wars and rumors of wars, famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, all in diverse places, which is just the beginning. The religious will be hated, afflicted and killed, many will be hateful, betray each other, and feel offended constantly. Love will almost disappear, and there will be much evil, deceit, and corruption. Eventually there will be a powerful political entity that will be like a beast but appear tame. Like the flood God must create an end to save mankind from complete annihilation. We are told that it will be like the days of Noah just before Jesus returns. Everybody will be going about their lives as normal. Right up to the moment of the flood they were eating, drinking, marrying, buying and selling, planting, and building. There will be great wickedness and corruption, most of mankind's ideas and thoughts will be evil. The planet will be filled with violence to the degree where there is a concern we will wipe ourselves out.

"But know this, that in the last days perilous times will come: For men will be lovers of themselves, lovers of money, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, unloving, unforgiving, slanderers, without self-control, brutal, despisers of good, traitors, headstrong, haughty, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, having a form of godliness but denying its power. And from such people turn away! For of this sort are those who creep into households and make captives of gullible women loaded down with sins, led away by various lusts, always learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." (2 Timothy 3:1-7)

The human race also had become very genetically polluted and corrupt from interference by outside forces. The bad angels who want to see our destruction, and the other angels who didn't keep their proper place. Some of the characteristics and practices resulting from the fallen Angels and their children included bloodlust, cannibalism, human and animal sacrifice, vampirism, bestiality, magic/k, genetic manipulation, and polygamy. With features of extra strength and intelligence, gigantism, hybridization, mutation, chimerism, twins, defects, polydactyly. Besides being big they had six toes or fingers, as well as multiple rows of teeth, skulls with horns, cranial ridges, and large fangs. Their offspring were cunning and violent and had evil demeanors. They ate each other and humans, and drank blood. They were hybrids of mixed human and angelic DNA, they also sinned against birds, and beasts, and reptiles, and fish.

From the evil angels, fallen Angels and their offspring, the Giants, come many different monsters and strange creatures. In Greek mythology the Chimera is a monstrous creature that was composed of several different animals. Other hybrids exist as combinations of human beings with animals and/or birds, as well as a variety of humanoid creatures. There are many with a human body and animal head. The most famous creatures are Griffins, Hippogriff, Unicorns, Pegasus, Kelpie, Dragons, Wyvern, Basilisks, Drake, Hydra, and Giant Serpents and Lake Monsters like the Loch Ness Monster, whose existence remain unproven, Merfolk, Sirens, Manticore, Faun, Satyrs, Centaurs, Minotaurs, Gorgons, Sphinx, Cyclops, Hell Hounds like Cerberus, Phoenix & Firebirds, Thunderbirds & Roc, Ziz Bird, Behemoth, Leviathan, Sumerian Winged Bulls, Gargoyles, Harpies, Furies, Nymphs, Fairies and other Fae, Brownies, Bogles, Pixies, Nixies, Will-O-Wisps, Sylphs, Sprites, Imps, Pucks, Nix Shapeshifting Water Spirits, Gnomes, Leprechauns, Gremlins, Hobgoblins, Goblins, Orcs, Ogres, Trolls, Dwarves, Hobbits, Elves, Treefolk & Ents, "Cryptids" like Sasquatch, Bigfoot, Yeti, Yowie, Chupacabra, Sigben, Mothmen, Demons, Sidhe, Banshees, Wendigo, Werewolves, Skinwalkers, Ghouls, Ghosts, Poltergeist, Reapers, Wraiths, Shades, Incubus, Succubus, Lamia, Vampires, And Zombies.

The different alien species may also fit somewhere here as either earthly based hybrids, or intra-dimensional beings aka the bad Angels. Aliens are often described as reptilian, serpentine or insectoid, sometimes amphibious.

To exactly be like the days of Noah it means that there will be at the least a return of the fallen Angels, the gods of ancient legend. Some of which did not look human or fully human. Besides those legends being universal to humanity, they also all mention the gods leaving and that one day they would be back. Who knows if when they return we will see a repeat and the reintroduction of all of the monsters and creatures from mythology. Maybe even some new monstrosities. It is clear that some of the fallen

Angels presented themselves to us deceptively as gods from the heavens. The evidence indicates they may even have appeared even as good angels calling themselves watchers. Presenting themselves as our protectors and guardians, watching over us until an appropriate time to appear and interfere. Saying they were wanting to help us. If they were actually a separate group from the fallen Angels of Lucifer, perhaps at first they were helping but later went in league with their brothers. In this case the watchers were possibly convinced to leave their posts by the evil angels. Having ulterior motives from the beginning, why else present themselves as good or as beings from elsewhere in the universe. It certainly would hide their involvement in a spiritual war and their being against humanity. It is telling that much of what they taught us was forbidden, and the fact that they were worshiped, sometimes becoming our leaders and enslaving us under them.

The great deception will likely be different this time because many are becoming aware of the fallen Angels and the Giants. Gaining knowledge of the whole story and connecting it with mythology and the ancient gods. The evil forces are convinced they will win so they must have changed their method of operation. With all of the current belief in extraterrestrials and aliens, that would be a perfect cover this time. Indeed we have seen plenty of alien and UFO activity throughout history, especially the last 65 years. Just as we are beginning to enter the troubles, before the end. Many cultures speak of beings which fit usual descriptions of aliens having visited them and leaving, saying that they would return. Interestingly just like what the ancient gods supposedly said. According to stories the aliens all taught us things and said they were interested in helping us. Why do these other beings always say that? Their help should be self-evident if it is really a help. It sounds almost like they are trying to convince us and gain our trust. With all of the strangeness and paranormal connected with them we have good reason to be suspicious. Much of their "help" has come in the form of advanced weaponry, at least that is what we see the most. Weaponry would be perfect to get us to help reduce our numbers for them. Some suspect that people like da Vinci, Newton, Tesla, Einstein, Von Braun, Oppenheimer, and Nash were contacted by aliens and telepathically given information. Also what we have been told by the aliens goes against most religious teachings. They claim to be the ones who created us and have caused disasters when we were out of control in their eyes. We have all heard the alien abduction stories about their scientific experiments carried out on victims. Probing, taking genetic materials, and putting in implants. Experiments seem to indicate they don't know enough to have created us.

Interestingly spiritualists and those involved with government programs supposedly working with aliens all say they are pure evil. The ones they have contacted through channeling and telepathy are described as being demonic entities presenting themselves as higher intelligences. Many occultists, especially Theosophists, have contacted ascended Masters. Believed to be spiritually enlightened beings who in past incarnations were ordinary humans but underwent a process of spiritual transformation. Some claim that they serve as teachers of mankind from the spiritual realm. They are considered members of the Great Brotherhood of Light, aka Great White Lodge, Great White Brotherhood or Universal White Brotherhood. Much of the secret initiatory knowledge of different occult lodges and wisdom schools were transmitted by occult means (telepathy and visions). It is hard to tell if they were not the same entities contacted in secret government experiments. Below you will see that contact has progressed from Angels and helpful spirits, to inter-dimensional beings, to aliens. There are various groups with nefarious motives currently trying to help them enter our realm. It seems that they are essentially doing work for who they follow and serve, even after many many centuries.

There is a connection between the "gray aliens" of popular UFO culture and the activities of occultists. Occult activity seems to be an ingredient behind the "gray alien" mystery. Interviews taken of ex-Wiccans and Satanists indicate a high level of contact with various alien types. Those coming from the highest echelon of Satanism known as the Illuminati, believe the original people who inhabited the earth descended from Mars via the Moon. They believe the first established civilization was Atlantis. The ancient civilizations of the Egyptians, Babylonians, Aztecs, Mayans, and Incas shared several intriguing characteristics possibly carried over from Atlantis:

They were extremely advanced scientifically and technologically. Animal and human sacrifices were performed at an alarming rate, preceding their demise. They believed they had acquired metaphysical knowledge from the "gods", whom they perceived as coming from the stars and also the subterranean level of the earth. These cultures disintegrated or became abruptly extinct while at the pinnacle of their existence, just like Atlantis.

Many of these revered and feared entities were described as looking like winged-reptilians or dragons. Similarly, Satan and his minions were depicted in an identical manner, as seen in artwork throughout the centuries. A few so-called experts in the field of UFOlogy are excited about the possibility that someday soon, these seemingly benevolent and misunderstood inter-galactic beings will openly reveal themselves to the Earth's human populace and bring about universal bliss. This grand deception is yet another lie conceived by the one referred to as "that old serpent" (Revelation 12:9).

Bible scholar I.D.E. Thomas asserts that the race of the "Nephilim" closely resemble the alien race of the blond Pleiadian Nordics, reported to be eight to nine feet tall. The Nazis attempted to revive this mystical Aryan race in the 1930's and 1940's using similar tactics as earlier occultists.

In 1558, Queen Elizabeth 1 appointed a man named John Dee to be her personal astrologer. He was also a notable occultist. Along with Edward Kelly they received "from divine sources," a communication system for establishing a dialogue with Angels. It was called Enochian magic. They would regularly summon alien-like entities.

The Englishman Aleister Crowley (1875 - 1947) was one of the most notorious occultists of his day, and perhaps of modern times. Self-styled as "The Beast 666," he went out of his way to live up to it with his sensationalism and self-promotion. He wrote a number of textbooks on ceremonial magick. He also founded and was head of a number of occult fraternities.

In January through March of 1918 Crowley began a series of magickal workings in New York City called the Amalantrah Workings. These were performed via Sexual & Ceremonial Magick with the intent to invoke certain "intelligences" to physical manifestation. In actuality, the workings typically manifested as a series of visions and communications received through the mediumship of his partner, Roddie Minor. At least one such "intelligence" was supposedly brought into physical manifestation via the Portal they created. A "magickally" created rent in the fabric of time and space. The entity either called itself "Lam," or was named

"Lam" by Crowley. He considered it to be of inter-dimensional origin. Using the language of Crowley's time, certain non-human intelligences such as Lam were what we today would term "extraterrestrial." "LAM is the Tibetan word for Way or Path, and LAMA is He who Goeth, the specific title of the Gods of Egypt, the Treader of the Path, in Buddhistic phraseology."

Following the success of these contacts, interest in occult circles, especially Crowleyian ones, gathered considerable steam. In 1987, Kenneth Grant, the generally acknowledged successor to Crowley, went so far as to formalize the Lam Workings into something called the Cult of Lam. Michael Bertiaux, a Lam contactee and invoker of note, viewed Lam as the "subterranean burgeoning of Lucifer-Gnosis." Considering that Gnosis means an intuitive knowing, this would mean that knowing Lam is to know a welling-up from the unconscious of an inner knowing of Lucifer. It is important to bear in mind that occultists at least may not necessarily see Lucifer as the devil, but rather as a "light bringer" who fell to earth. That he wants to help us and is the good one while God is tyrannical and cruel.

It is generally agreed within occult circles that Crowley intentionally opened a portal of entry via magick ritual in the Amalantrah Workings which allowed the likes of Lam and other similar entities a passageway onto the earth-world. The rift "in-between the spaces of the stars," created by the Amalantrah Working, created a gateway.

It is said that the Portal was further enlarged in 1946, facilitating a monumental paradigm shift in human consciousness. This Magickal working was called the Babylon Working, and like the Amalantrah Working, it was based on ceremonial sex magick. John Whiteside Parsons [who specialized in jet propulsion and was one of the founders of the JPL] and L. Ron Hubbard, founder of Scientology [and former Naval Intelligence Officer] were involved in a special project during 1945 and 1946. This special project which was carried out in the California desert, was a part of magical ceremonies [black witchcraft] known as the 'Babylon Working', designed by Aleister Crowley, who died in 1947 [year of the alleged Roswell UFO crash and the implementation of the National Security Act]. The purpose of the series of ceremonies performed by Parsons and Hubbard was to unseal an inter-dimensional gateway, that had been sealed in antiquity thereby allowing other dimensional entities known as the 'Old Ones' access to our space/time continuum. The culmination of the ceremonies was reported to have been successful, having resulted in the establishment of 'extra-terrestrial contact'.

From the diaries of the participants, they were not as adept as Crowley in the closing of portals. What they seemed to have accomplished was the drastic enlargement and ripping of an existing Magickal Portal and the subsequent non-closure of it. In any event, the modern UFO era began exactly a year and a half later on June 24th, 1947, with Kenneth Arnold's sighting over the Cascade Mountains in Washington State. Reports of these UFO-associated entities became prevalent in the 1980's.

It would seem that the current invokers of Lam are absolutely clear that Lam and the grey-aliens are one. Noted UFO/Forcean researcher and author John Keel felt that much of the paranormal situations he investigated, such as the "Mothman," were at root due to occult activity of some sort. What is significant and of pertinence here is that many members of the occult community (O.T.O./Crowleyian) do indeed believe these beings and powers to be "real" and govern themselves accordingly.

They spend considerable time attempting communication and invocation of them, and believe it is for the benefit of us all.

A strong relationship exists between occultic ritual sites, top secret military installations, and UFO/alien sightings and abductions. There also appears to be a magnetic spiritual vortex (or vacuum) which has drawn many "New Agers" to these areas. One prime example is the area near Dulce, NM, where the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) has a highly-secured underground complex on the Jicarella Indian Reservation -- a region known for Native American shamanism. The facility is said to be used for genetic engineering, including cloning. Several witnesses who were employed there reported seeing different breeds of aliens. Congruently, the Mojave Desert in California has its share of military bases involved in "black projects", ranging from research and development of "advanced" aircraft to MKULTRA mind control operations. Such as area 51.

Several abductees, psychics (through out-of-body experiences) and former employees of the Dulce facility reported seeing large vats, full of blood and body parts; essentially, a human stew. Their understanding is that particular varieties of aliens, mostly Reptilians and "Grays" bathe in these vats to absorb nutrients through their skin. This could explain animal mutilations where they are drained of fluids. One of the secretions these aliens crave is adrenaline, which is generated in great quantity when the victim is tortured or traumatized at the moment of death. This glandular hormone is most potent in children.

Striking similarities are found in Egyptian Satanism, as graphically detailed in The Egyptian Book of the Dead. "Behold ye then god this great slaughter, mighty of terror, he washeth in your blood, he batheth in your gore." It is stated that some scientists that it was common practice for them to sacrifice infants and young children for the purpose of obtaining the life or energy force from the victim.

Additional observations by some who have witnessed aliens recall distinct insignias or emblems on their uniforms. To no surprise, alien symbology is identical to that of the Mystery Religions of ancient Babylon. For instance, the winged-sun disk is worn by the "Draconis" or Reptilian race and is prominently displayed throughout the sliding scale of occultism. The double-headed eagle or Phoenix is associated with the Lyrae-Grays; a trademark of the Scottish Rite branch of Freemasonry. A book describing the interaction between non-human beings from other planets and the "enlightened ones" (33rd degree Freemasons) is found in the book, The Hidden Life of Freemasonry.

Mario Pazzaglini, PhD., published his meticulous research pertaining to alien symbols in a book titled, Symbolic Messages: An Introduction to a Study of "Alien" Writing. He effectively deciphered over 150 samples and concluded that a high percentage of the alien alphabets are similar to magical alphabets of Hermetic and Enochian origins.

Some skeptics have taken the position that the UFO/alien phenomenon can be best explained as a form of psychosis or hysteria as conceptualized within Jungian psychology. Others view it as an elaborate government hoax, designed to further confuse the populace. All the above explanations can exist simultaneously and need not be exclusive from one another. What better way to manipulate one's perception of reality by throwing out several different scenarios, thereby making it difficult to ascertain a consistent pattern or trend that would hopefully lead to finding the elusive "truth". In adding to the perplexity, cattle mutilations have been theorized to be the nefarious work of space creatures for experimental purposes. Others feel it's a result of cult rituals. Yet, another explanation is that it's a smoke-screen perpetrated by government/military psy-ops in order to escalate our already induced paranoia.

There also seems to be an increase in demonic activity as of late. Apparently the Vatican has recently reopened a school to teach exorcisms. The number of official church exorcists has risen from around 75 to over 300 and they are now going to investigate many more cases. It is clear there is an increase in paranormal and demonic activity happening. This could partially be a result of increased activity with black magic and these portals. It is just one more sign that we are truly returning to the days of Noah. Much of the black projects and current high technology has been reverse engineered and developed thanks to contact with these entities. Likely the mind control and genetic research technology is from them. Not just the military technology.

The insurgency is growing in scope and is fully active on every level. The level of misinformation and confusion seems to be growing every day. Corruption is rampant and it is clear the elite and appointed taskmasters are trying to reduce the global populace to slavery. Finances are becoming difficult for many, rising food and energy prices greatly reduce individual power. True happiness is hard to come by and may be connected with the decline in organized religion. We seem to have entered a period of unending warfare and fear of terrorism. We also seem to be being prepared for disclosure about aliens, alien stuff is all over recently. Natural disasters are also beginning to reek a constant havoc on the planet. These are all outward signs but the insurgency in essence is a spiritual battle which we are intimately involved with. The enemy is powerful and intent on being victorious, believing they are currently winning. They seek our destruction and at the heart they desire to depose God. Purely out of spite and envy. Angels, including the fallen ones, are able to take any form they wish such as beauty, brilliance and the appearance of goodness. It would be nothing for them to take the appearance of aliens or even UFOs in order to deceive. The enemy is also already here among us and carrying out chaos spiritually. All of Satan's minions are currently restrained and waiting release yet influencing our desires telepathically. In the meantime their demons carry out their evil activity unceasingly. Their offspring wherever they are are preparing for a massive physical return invasion. The eventual result will be the release of Satan and his angels. Also many humans are deceived already and are in league with evil either willingly or without knowledge. One of your best defenses is to read the Bible and study prophecy. The best way to protect yourself is to "know thy enemy" and try to stay on the right side. It is also essential to keep the faith and not be troubled because all of this must come to pass. Yet it is not the end, nor is your life, and those who can endure to the very end will be saved.
